· Directions are given according to the Chinese method of using the medicines. The nature of the oil is very mild, but its action is exceedingly good, possessing wonderfully curative effects in both internal and external diseases. As it is an invaluable medicine it should be kept on hand ready for use by all persons, whether at an elder of the kirk. For external use rub the oil on the tem. men. Aye, aye, weemen were the doonfa'

PARSON AND SPORTSMAN.

Mr J. W. Blake, writing in the Scotsman, has given a charming sketch of 'An Old-Fashioned Parish Minister, the Rev. James Goldie, of Temple, in the Presbytery of Dalkeith. Ho was ordained in 1789 at the early age of 22; he laboured in the Orange River Colonies, a representative of parish for 58 years, and was 80 years old when he died. He is described as one of the 'good old sort,' but his k'nd would not leading member of one of the prominent suit nowadays - not even in a sequestored parish. THE COST OF THE WAR.

What the Transvaul and Orange State Can Pay.

With reference to the question as to what proportion of the cost of the Transvaal war should be borne by the Transveal and the St. James's Budget has interviewed a groups of Mining Companies in the Trans-vanl. This official went into the matter much more fully than Mr. J. B. Robinson has done, and in addition he was able to say that his own view coincided with tho opinions generally held by the representatives of the various mining interests in the Transvaal.

It may be said, by way of introduction, that the official in question displayed none of the reluctance or seeming asperity which has characterised Mr J. B. Robinson's attitude on Sir Michael Hicks-Beach's recent speech. On the contrary, he entered with the fair proportion which the two Colonies should be called upon to pay. Whether, however, it will be considered a proper proportion by the people of the Mother Country is another question.

'Let us take, said the gentleman referred to, the cost of the war as roughly £100,000,000. With the guarantee of the British Government this could be borrowed at 3 per cent., with another 11 per cent. sinking fund for the redemption of the debt in, say 40 years, which is about the performed his solemn function. This done, time it is estimated the gold will last. I believe it will last longer, but, anyhow, that will be a fair time to allow to paying off the

Well, now, there are several ways in which the Transvaal can be taxed, by the imposition of quit rents, through the Customs or railways, by a duty on dynamite, or, last of all, by a tax either on the output of gold or the dividends of the different Companies. With reference to the last,

THE TAXING OF DIVIDENDS would be a juster way than the taxing of the output, as there may be several outerprises which may have a certain output but no dividende.'

' If we tax the dividends we shall capture the mining magnates and shareholders on both sides; that is to say, in England and South Africa? Well (replied the gentleman inferviewed), they can remit the income-tax in England are doing at present, or at least only the. difference between the income-tax in England and the war-tax in the Transvaal. It seems fair enough to retain both?"

'I will not dispute that matter much with you. Let us go on to the other sources of taxation.' 'The Netherlands Railway T Yes. Now the Government will get a splendid source of revenue from that. There is scarcely any doubt that the Netherlands Railway Company will prove, by their policy during the war, to have merited confiscation. If not, we can soon settle them in another way, by making their shares practically valueless. Anyhow, we shall have them. The Transvaal Government, as you know, owned at least 5,000 shares in the Company, and these naturally revert to the British Government. Dynamite can bear taxation, and the Customs also can be made to yield a certain amount, Of the Customs I will speak later on. Roughly speaking, there are now some

6. The Chinking Regulations (which need revision) work well, and the development of the export trade of that portwhich does not supply staples in demand in the West -is wholly due to their satisfactory operation, and I am convinced that if all obstructions were removed from their application at the other ports, a similar, development would follow, with a large expansion in the inland steam traffic.

7. The working of the Chinkiang Rules is as follows :—The Foreign applicant enters into a Bond with certain penalties undertaking to export the certificated produce. On arrival of the goods at the port of shipment, 3 tariff duties are charged, viz, 1 tariff transit dues and 21 duties deposited as security for fulfilment of Bond. After paying transit dues, if exported, full export duty on the produce is levied, and the balance (I and \(\frac{1}{2} \) duty) is refunded. If shipped coastwise, export and coast trade duty are collected, and the balance of deposit is retained by the local exchequer in commutation of likin. When produce does not leave the port, the entire deposit of 21 duty is retained and transferred to the provincial treasury. 8. The merits of the Chinkiang system are that it is a well-tried procedure; the foreign experter does obtain produce at the h tariff rate stipulated by treaty, while the inland revenue is protected from fraud by prepayment of the likin equivalent, which is retained by the local authorities-

9. Though introduced over 40 years ago, the Tariff transit system is practically still inoperative throughout China. That this is not due to the likin being lower than the h tariff dues, or under the 2h duties of the Chinking rules, is proved by the collection at that port, where the outward transit receipts rauk above any other port-Shanghai excepted, which derives its transit dues from silk—although the Chinkiang area produces no staples exported to Western markets.

10. Were the limitation imposed by the provincial officials, on the kind of produce to be certificated, climinated from the rules (at Chinking they are illegally restricted which the likin equivalent would be placing almost the entire likin collection in the hands of the Maritime Customs. Nominally the collection of likin us security for the 44% China loan is in the hands of the Customs, but as a fact it is not so. 11. Nearly all the Yangtse ports, recognising the advantage of the Chinking transit system, have essayed, unsuccessfully, to bring them into effective operation; but as is the best of all COD LIVER OIL preparathe question of fiscal reforms and trading tions without a trace of the fishy taste. of the British Government, I cannot too Retail from A. NEW YEAR'S BOOKS. BECOND NOTICE.

There is, we are often told, no royal road to knowledge. The batch of books before us is at least an example of how, now-adays, the way is made level, smooth and wide by Messrs Blackie and Son.

Our Darling's First Book, printed at the firm's celebrated Villafield Press, Glasgow, consists of bright pictures and easy lessons for the smallest of little folk. It has been based on Miss Jennett Humphrey's delightful 'Laugh and Learn,' and is sure to be gladly thumbed and crowed over by youngsters of the tenderest age. It opens with an aptly illustrated-alphabet, in big, bold, effective capitals, and advances by easy stages, through the building up of small words, short but complete sentences, notation, numeration and writing, to familiar gift edges, two shillings.

words and ideas are well within the mental grasp of little folk. This series, stoutly got up in cloth extra, with coloured frontipieces by H. A. Brock, and with black and white pictures interspersed in the body o the book, is sure to be welcomed by young readers of both sexes. No youngster of six or seven will have any trouble in Were the sights of the Barfleur thrown following, with lively and sustained intorest, the simple unaffected narratives con tained in the sixpenny series. In the next series at ninepence each, the words are everything is so nicely graded that the books here met with are fitted for children ranging between the ages of seven and nine. The third series, at a shilling each volume, has been made for the use of youngsters from hine to twelve. Teddy' penny series, is the story of the doings of a London-bred lad of seven, who, while his father and mother are temporarily away in America, stays some six months with his Aunt, Miss Penrose, in a Cornish village, close to the soa.
